Cedar Park hasn't always been the bustling city that it is today. Pioneers Hattie Cluck and her husband George W. Cluck were two of the founding members of Cedar Park. Hattie was one of the first women to brave the historic Chisholm Trail. It was on the trail in 1873 that the Clucks decided to purchase a large plot of land to build their homestead in what would eventually become Cedar Park. In their later years, the Clucks donated a portion of their land to the city with the contingency that it be used as parkland.

The city went through a few name changes over the years, and finally became “Cedar Park” in 1887. The namesake was simple enough, it came from the piney cedar trees that cloak the land in the area. With the addition of the rail stop built next to the parkland, Cedar Park became a major hub for welcoming visitors to the growing city. That same hospitality and pioneering spirit remains as Cedar Park continues to flourish as a treasured vacation destination. This is especially true if you love nature.
